Sourcing Images Online

Just because something is online doesn't mean we can download and use it any way that we want. Material online is to view, read, and enjoy—NOT for us to simply take and reuse. Even at an educational institution, not everything we do qualifies as "fair use" of copyrighted material.

For any online image or material, we must find and read the fine print that says if and how we can use that image or material, and what requirements there are for using it, including how to cite the source or photographer.

University of Idaho copyright policy and information:
https://www.lib.uidaho.edu/copyright/guide.html

Creative Commons license information: http://creativecommons.org/licenses/

Links for Image Sources

No commercial endorsement of these sites is intended.

Public Domain

Material in the public domain is available for free use. We are not required to cite the source, but it is still a good professional practice.

https://www.nasa.gov (and other federal government agencies)

http://www.ars.usda.gov/is/graphics/photos/search.htm

http://www.pond5.com/free

Open Content

Images available via Creative Commons licenses will have different restrictions or specific citation requirements, so read the fine print for each image you are considering and make sure your use qualifies.

https://commons.wikimedia.org/wiki/Main_Page

Royalty-Free

Images to buy; may have limitations, so find and read the fine print.

https://www.shutterstock.com

Managed Rights

Images to buy; limited exclusivity (others may buy the same image and use it).

http://www.gettyimages.com

Club/Subscription Services

Free to join or subscribe; free downloads that still require that we cite the source as directed.

http://bugwood.org/

More Sources and Information

https://www.picmonkey.com/blog/free-stock-photos

https://mashable.com/2017/05/23/where-to-find-royalty-free-images/#ZrMiWReiZmO3

http://www.entrepreneur.com/article/237094