Money Skills for Life

In this educational game students will learn about taxes through the experiences of a small group of citizens living in an old western mining town. In order to help the town survive they will have to work together, build public goods like schools, wells, and railroads, and find a way to pay for them! But beware, local bandits are always on the prowl and may undermine the efforts of the town's honest citizens! This game is a terrific experience for teens who might otherwise become disinterested during a lesson on taxes.
